Healthcare Level 3 Course Completion

Congratulations, Healthcare Level 3 Graduates!

A huge congratulations to our New Zealand Certificate in Health and Wellbeing (Level 3) (Healthcare Assistance) students, who have officially completed their course this cycle!

It's been a journey worth celebrating: from their industry placement earlier in the year to the Comprehensive Care mental health workshop back in May, this cohort has grown into confident, capable healthcare assistants ready for the real world.

We're especially proud to share that a good number of graduates have already secured job offers or are now working in rest homes across Auckland, putting their training straight into practice and making a genuine difference in people's lives.

Congratulations again to every graduate. We can't wait to see where your healthcare careers take you.

Japanese International Study Tours

Global Connections: A Winter of Cultural Exchange

Between late July and the end of August, NZSVET was proud to host four groups of Japanese high school students as part of their International Study Tours to Auckland.

Each group spent their time with us building English speaking confidence in focused, conversation-based classes, exploring the city through guided tours and landmark visits, and taking part in genuine cultural experiences alongside our local students and staff.

The tours wrapped up with huge success. Our visitors left with sweet memories of their time in Auckland, and the feedback we received was outstanding, a wonderful reflection of the warmth and energy each group brought to NZSVET.

We loved hosting all four groups this winter, and we're already looking forward to welcoming more international students in the cycles ahead.

English Micro-Credential – Learning Beyond the Classroom

English Micro-Credential – Up Maungawhau

As always, NZSVET makes sure that learning doesn't stop at the classroom door, and this cycle's English Micro-Credential students proved it once again with a visit to Maungawhau (Mt Eden), one of Auckland's most iconic volcanic cones.

Standing at the summit, students took in sweeping views across the city, learned about the maunga's significance to Māori as a former pā site, and put their English into practice describing what they could see and how it felt to be there. It was a day that brought history, landscape, and language together in a way no classroom wall ever could.

Trips like these are a reminder of why we love getting our students out into the world: language comes alive when it's put to real use, and our students never fail to rise to the occasion.
